

What does being an RCM mean to you?

“

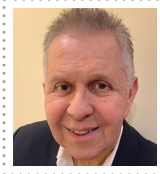

The RCM designation is my way of showing my experience and expertise in the condominium management industry. The RCM is a visible reminder to the board members, owners, and professionals that I work with that I have invested time and effort into furthering my skills. When hiring managers for my growing firm, I look for confident, skilled, and experienced managers. This is why I look for the RCM designation in all of my hires.

Michael Trendota, RCM
*Co-founder and Chief Operating Officer
Alwington Communities Inc.*

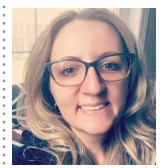

It is not often that I stop to think about what my RCM designation means to me. However, I know that it impacts my whole life, my sense of who I am, my integrity and my intellectual and personal ideals.

This designation has fulfilled my desire to keep on learning, studying, and applying what I have learned. As an RCM, a community can benefit from my knowledge and experience, and I can now have intelligent discussions with lawyers, engineers, and accountants. I am proud to have RCM after my name.

William Colucci, RCM
*Senior Property Manager

Being an RCM means I follow codes and compliance standards with commitment, hard work, and dedication in serving the condominium industry.
